The YouTube update added this My Subscribers feed to the toolbox where YouTube received a small update in the Google Play Store to version 4.4.11, and adding my subscriptions to the left toolbar allows you to access videos uploaded from one of the YouTube channels you subscribe to more quickly. A bug that registered YouTube users for no reason has been removed from the update, and video creator channels now get the YouTube One Channel brand. As usual with these updates, there are other bug fixes and stability improvements. The whole update is free, sitting there waiting for you to download it.source: YouTube via AndroidCentral SUBSCRIBE TO OUR NEWSLETTER! Want to play YouTube videos in the background on your smartphone? Here's howSiddhant Dahiya Learn how to watch a video or listen to music on YouTube on Android and iOS while using different apps or taking the screen off. | Toi Tech | April 28, 2020, 1:56pm ISTNEW DELHI: An annoying fact about the YouTube app on Android and iOS devices is that it doesn't allow background playback. If you're watching a video or listening to music on YouTube and browse another app or turn off the screen, the video/audio is automatically paused. What if you want to listen to music on the YouTube app on your smartphone while you browse the web or do something else? The easiest way to do this is to buy a YouTube Red subscription, which will give you bonus features such as the ability to download YouTube videos to smartphones, a Google Play Music subscription, and will also get rid of YouTube ads. However, it is not yet available in India. If you want to play YouTube videos in the background on your mobile devices (for free), you can do so in the following ways: For iOS * Go to the YouTube site via Safari.* Search and play the music video you want and wait for the video to play in full screen.* Next, press the Home button; this will take you to the home screen and stop the audio.* Now swipe in and bring the control center and tap the play button. Now, your favorite music video will continue to play in the background as you browse between different apps or even lock your device. This is useful, but because it works you will have to delete the YouTube app, otherwise Safari will automatically redirect the application to you. However, if you don't want to delete the app, you can open the YouTube site through the Google Chrome browser and follow the same steps above. For Android* First, download and install the Mozilla browser on your Android device.* Open the YouTube site in Mozilla. * Go to the settings (the three dots in the upper right corner) and tap the desktop tab. * You will be redirected to the YouTube desktop site. * Play any music video you want here and it will continue to play background while using other apps or turn off the screen. Note This tip only works in chrome web browser. In addition, you must double-click and not left-click to display this option. Once selected, the window is placed in the lower-right corner of the screen by default, as shown in the following image. You can move this window by clicking and holding down the left button anywhere in the video and dragging the video window to where you want to place it. The window can also be resized by moving the mouse cursor to the top of the video until a two-headed arrow appears, and then clicking and holding down the left button to the video. Above is an example of YouTube videos played in a small window while browsing the Computer Hope web page. This feature is excellent for those moments when you want to watch a video while doing other things on a computer. To restore the video window to the browser tab, click the x in the upper-right corner of the window or the Back to Browser icon in the lower-right corner of the window. Using the image in pictures on Android Android smartphone users can also take advantage of this feature. To open a YouTube video in image mode, select a video from the YouTube app. Then, press the Home button or use the corresponding gesture, while the video is still playing. The video appears as a small window that can be moved to the screen using drag-and-drop. The window remains on the screen when other applications are opened. You can access controls for the video, including suspending and switching to the next video in a playlist, by tapping the video. To close the video, tap the x in the upper-right corner of the window. Further information Despite the name, Mexican Train Dominoes, also known simply as Trains, is played mainly in the United States. One of the most popular domino games, it can be played with two or 14 players, so no matter how big or small your family is, everyone can participate. Here's a full set of rules for this fun game. There are no official rules for Mexican Train Dominoes, as there are many slight variations, depending on the source. Our recommended rules are based on those often used in competitive tournament gaming. Players: Best with four or eight playersEquipment: Typically, Mexican Train Dominoes is played with a standard set of double-12 dominoes (12-12) with 91 dominoes, but the size of the set can be adjusted based on the number of players. Every player also needs a marker, like a dime. An additional marker is also required. A station to be set up in the center of the table is optional and can be included in commercial playsets. Finally, you will need a pencil and paper to use as a score pad. Objective: The goal of the Mexican train is to be the first player to lay out all your dominoes in each round and earn the overall total of the smallest points when all rounds are completed. Choose a set of dominoes appropriate for the number of players: for 2-3 players, use a double-9 set (9-9); each player takes eight dominoes. For 4-6 players, use a double-12(12-12) set; each player takes 12 dominoes. For 7-8 players, use a double-12 (12-12) set; each player takes 10 dominoes. For players, use a double-15 (15-15) set; each player takes 11 dominoes. For 13-14 players, use a double-18 set (18-18); each player takes 11 dominoes. Find the double domino that acts as the engine for the game. This double domino will be the highest double domino of the set used. For example, if you're playing a set 12-12 (recommended from 4 to 8 players), the initial engine will be the domino 12-12. Spin all the rest of the dominoes face down on the gaming table and mix them thoroughly. Commercially sold game sets can have a central hub that is used as a roundhouse or station from which trains will be built. This hub will have a fitting where the double dominoes are located. If you play without this hub, simply use the double domino itself as a roundhouse. All players draw their dominoes at the same time without showing the other players. The number of dominoes picked up will depend on the number of players in the game. Each player then stands his domino on the edge so they can see faces, but their opponents can't. The remaining dominoes are left on the table face down. This supply is known as a cemetery. To determine the initial player, each player extracts a single domino from the graveyard. The domino with the highest score (pip) total designates the initial player. Player #1 starts playing by building a series of dominoes from the engine, starting with a domino that has a pip count corresponding to the engine dominoes. Each domain in the string must be played so that pip counts match the exposed end of the previous domino. If a player has no game, they must draw a domino from the bone stack. If it matches the motor pip count, it can be played back immediately. The game now continues clockwise, with each subsequent player attempting to build a drain that extends from the engine. Players who are unable to start their train must draw a domino from the bone stack (it can be played immediately if its pip count matches the engine dominoes). In the second round around the game table, each player must attempt to play another domino. There are several possible plays here. The player can: play a domino that corresponds to the pip count of the exposed half of the previous domino played on their train. For example, if player #1 played a domino 12-5 in the first round, he can now play a domino that has 5 pips at the end of their train. If the #1 has a double domino corresponding to the count of exposed pips, it is played transversely (perpendicular) through the exposed half of the previous domino. If the #1 player does not have a possible game on their train, they can alternately start the Mexican Train if they have another domino that corresponds to the pip count of the central engine. This new Mexican train is a public train that is free for all players to play on for the duration of the game. If the #1 has no game, it must draw a domino from the bone stack. If its number of seats corresponds to the open end of the player's train, it can be placed immediately. If not, the #1 places a a at the end of the train, meaning the train is open for other players to play on. The #1's player will now remain free to be used by other players until he is able to play on his train once again. At this time, the marker can be removed, making the train protected by other player players The game now proceeds to #2 players and subsequent players, who have the same options: play a domino with a spot count that corresponds to the number of spots exposed at the end of their train. The Mexican train starts, if it hasn't already started. Play a domino on another player's train that has been opened for public use with a marker. If it is not possible to play, the player must draw a domino and place a marker at the end of their train, meaning it is a public train on which other players can play. This train remains public until the player can play a domino again on their train. If a player has a double domino that corresponds to the exposed end of a train, the player announces double and immediately places the dominoes transversely through the exposed end of the train. The player must then play a second domino on any eligible train, satisfying their double or playing a domino elsewhere on the board. If the exposed double card is not resolved by the player who played it, it must be answered by one of the subsequent players before a domino can be played elsewhere. When a player cannot respond to a double, the player must draw a domino from the bone stack and place the marker at the end of his train, making it public. The #1 ends when a player plays the last domino in hand. Immediately, the other players total the pips on the dominoes still held in their hands. A player designated as the top scorer writes the score of all players: whoever has the low count has won the round. The game continues with the next rounds, with the engine dominoes counting down for each later lower double dominoes: double-11, double-10, double-9, etc. The rules for each round are exactly the same as in the first game, with high point totals and added to each player's running score at the end of each round. When a full round was played with the last double domino (0-0) acting as the engine, the points for all rounds are added up and the player with the total lowest overall score declared the winner of the game. There are a number of rule variants that are often used: for a longer game, Mexican Train Dominoes is sometimes played with only one domino played in the first round, rather than a chain of dominoes. Or, this rule is sometimes used when players want to play a single short game consisting of a single round. In some versions, a player playing a double must make their own double dominoes, rather than playing the second domino anywhere on the board. If they do not have a corresponding domino, they must draw from the bone stack and place a marker at the end of their train, making it public. If the balanced dominoes correspond to a eligible, can be played immediately. In another rule variant, a double domino must be answered by a chicken foot, placing three dominoes on both ends and in the middle of the double dominoes. In other words, responding to a double 6 dominoes requires a player to have three dominoes with 6 pips games designate double-0 (0-0) dominoes as a count for 25 or 50 points, making it a domino you want to avoid holding at the end of the game. Game.
